DEFENDANTS, COMMISSION FOR LAWYER DISCIPLINE AND SEANA WILLINGS', FIRST AMENDED MOTION TO DISMISS PURSUANT TO FEDERAL RULES OF CIVIL PROCEDURE 12(b)(1) AND 12(b)(6)

TO THE HONORABLE UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE ROBERT L. PITMAN:

COME NOW Defendants, the Commission for Lawyer Discipline (CFLD) and Seana Willing, the Chief Disciplinary Counsel (the "CDC" and/or "Willing") (hereinafter referred to collectively as "Defendants") and file this motion to dismiss Plaintiff, Edward Randolph Turnbull, IV's ("Turnbull" or "Plaintiff") claims against Defendants pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure 12(b)(1) and 12(b)(6). In support thereof, Defendants offer the following:

I. INTRODUCTION

Turnbull filed this lawsuit on or about March 22, 2023, and amended it on May 25, 2023, following Defendants' initial dismissal motion. In it, he asserts Defendants violated his constitutional rights, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §1331. He also generally claims that he is suing Defendants for violations of the Equal Protection and First Amendment provisions of the U.S. Constitution under 42 U.S.C. §1983, as well as for violations of the "Texas Constitution, Art. 1, §§13 and 19." [Dkt. #20, pp. 5-6]. However, Turnbull's lawsuit is merely an expression of his displeasure that a voluntary grievance committee panel did not agree with his opinion that two attorneys (the "Microsoft Attorneys"), serving as opposing counsel in an ongoing lawsuit he filed against the Microsoft Corporation, committed professional misconduct.<sup>1</sup> In fact, the first twenty paragraphs of the "Factual Background" of this lawsuit are devoted to Turnbull's one-sided interpretation of his underlying dispute with the Microsoft Attorneys.<sup>2</sup> [Dkt. #20, pp. 6-15].

Specifically, Turnbull indicates that he filed grievances against the Microsoft Attorneys because he believes they committed professional misconduct while defending the Microsoft Corporation in the above-referenced lawsuit he filed on behalf of himself and his law firm, Turnbull Legal Group, PLLC ("TLG"). He represents that pursuant to a Microsoft Service Agreement, TLG had been using a OneDrive<sup>3</sup> account to store client files and records and sometime in October 2019, Microsoft suspended TLG's OneDrive account, denying TLG

<sup>1</sup> Defendants remain subject to the confidentiality requirements imposed by the Texas Rules of Disciplinary Procedure (the "TRDPs") with regard to all information and/or associated records concerning any underlying attorney grievances allegedly filed by Turnbull. TEX. RULES DISCIPLINARY P. R. 2.16, reprinted in Tex. Gov't Code Ann., tit. 2, Subtit. G, app. A-1 (West 2005).

access to its client files, after Microsoft determined that there existed “child pornography among TLG’s Data...” He also indicates he was notified by Microsoft that the “material had been removed from TLG’s account, and that TLG had been reported to the federal authorities.” [Dkt. #20, pp. 6-8, & 12].

Turnbull claims the Microsoft Attorneys wrongfully withheld TLG property, made misrepresentations to him during their verbal discussions, and made misrepresentations in their pleadings when they referred to the content found on TLG’s OneDrive as “child pornography”, among other things. [Dkt. #20, p. 21]. However, as mentioned above, his alleged grievances concerning the alleged misrepresentations he claims the Microsoft Attorneys made in their pleadings and/or allegations that TLG property was improperly withheld, involve unresolved fact issues still pending before the district court in his lawsuit against Microsoft.

A. Turnbull’s allegations against the Defendants.

Turnbull’s factual allegations regarding the Defendants consist largely of a recounting of his understanding of the attorney discipline system and his perception of how his grievances should have proceeded through the system. In relevant part, Turnbull’s allegations are as follows:

- 1) Turnbull filed Grievances with the CDC against the Microsoft Attorneys alleging violations of ethical standards. [Dkt. #20, ¶42].
- 2) The CDC initially classified the Grievances as Inquiries and dismissed them. [Dkt. #20, ¶43].
- 3) Turnbull appealed the classification of the dismissed Grievances to the Board of Disciplinary Appeals (“BODA”). [Dkt. #20, ¶44].
- 4) BODA granted Turnbull’s appeal and upgraded the Grievances against the Microsoft Attorneys for further investigation by the CDC. [Dkt. #20, ¶45].
- 5) The Microsoft Attorneys responded to the Complaints. [Dkt. #20, ¶46].
- 6) Turnbull submitted a reply. [Dkt. #20, ¶47].
- 7) The respondent attorneys submitted a sur-reply. [Dkt. #20, ¶48].
- 8) Turnbull submitted a sur sur-reply. [Dkt. #20, ¶49].

- 9) Brannon sent Turnbull correspondence notifying him that the CDC had completed its investigation and that the Complaints would be presented to a Summary Disposition Panel for possible dismissal. [Dkt. #20, ¶50].
- 10) Turnbull's counsel sent correspondence to the CDC "challenging and questioning" its No Just Cause Determination. [Dkt. #20, ¶¶ 51 and 52].
- 11) The Summary Disposition Panel dismissed Turnbull's Complaints against the Microsoft Attorneys. [Dkt. #20, ¶53].
- 12) Turnbull filed additional Grievances with the CDC against the Microsoft Attorneys, alleging violations of ethical standards. [Dkt. #20, ¶56].
- 13) The CDC classified Turnbull's new Grievances as Inquiries and dismissed them. [Dkt. #20, ¶60].
- 14) Turnbull appealed the dismissal of the new Grievances to BODA. [Dkt. #20, ¶61].
- 15) BODA affirmed CDC's classification decision to dismiss Turnbull's new Grievances as Inquiries. [Dkt. #20, ¶62].

Turnbull concludes that Defendants violated his state and federal constitutional rights because the CDC completed its investigation into his alleged Complaints against the Microsoft Attorneys and presented the Complaints to a voluntary Summary Disposition Panel, rather than setting a hearing before an Investigatory Hearing Panel. In expressing his distress that the Summary Disposition Panel did not agree with his belief that the Microsoft Attorneys committed professional misconduct and provide him with his desired outcome, Turnbull does not claim the CDC failed to follow any rule/obligation set forth in the TRDPs; [Dkt. #20, generally]. Turnbull, instead, resorts to baseless and inflammatory charges that he was treated differently because he is a criminal defense attorney and/or was somehow discriminated against in violation of constitutional and "equal protection" rights he claims he is entitled to as a non-party complainant in the Texas attorney grievance process.

II. THE GRIEVANCE PROCESS

The Texas Supreme Court's authority to regulate the practice of law is an inherent power derived from the Texas Constitution's delegation of the judicial power of the Government of the State of Texas to the judiciary and the Court. TEX. CONST. ART. II, SEC. 1 & ART. V, SEC. 1 & 3;

see also, Eichelberger v. Eichelberger, 582 S.W.2d 395, 397-399 (Tex. 1979); In re Nolo Press/Folk Law, Inc., 991 S.W.2d 768, 769-770 (Tex. 1999). As that Court has explained, “The inherent powers of a court are those which it may call upon to aid in the exercise of its jurisdiction, in the administration of justice, and in the preservation of its independence and integrity,” and such power, “[h]as existed since the days of the Inns of Court in common law English jurisprudence.” Eichelberger, 582 S.W.2d at 398-399 (citations omitted). To that end, the Texas Supreme Court has promulgated the Texas Disciplinary Rules of Professional Conduct (the “TDRPCs”) and the TRDPs, setting forth both the standards of conduct to which all Texas attorneys are to be held (the TDRPCs) and the procedural rules by which attorney disciplinary actions are to be governed (the TRDPs).

Once a grievance is filed in Texas, the CDC must determine whether to classify the grievance as a “Complaint” (a writing that alleges conduct that, if true, constitutes professional misconduct) or an “Inquiry” (a writing that alleges conduct that, even if true, does not constitute professional misconduct). TEX. RULES DISCIPLINARY P. R. 2.10 (emphasis added). If the CDC determines that the allegations do not constitute professional misconduct, the writing is dismissed as an Inquiry. TEX. RULES DISCIPLINARY P. R. 2.10. A complainant has the right to appeal the dismissal of a grievance as an Inquiry to the Board of Disciplinary Appeals (BODA). TEX. RULES DISCIPLINARY P. R. 2.10(A).

Grievances classified by the CDC as a Complaint or overturned on appeal by BODA for classification as a Complaint, are upgraded for investigation. In those instances, the respondent attorney must respond to the allegations of misconduct within thirty days of receiving notice of the allegations. TEX. RULES DISCIPLINARY P. R. 2.10 (emphasis added). Pursuant to TRDP 2.12, the CDC is mandated to investigate all Complaints.

After receiving the response from a respondent attorney, the CDC is required to: 1) find Just Cause in the evidence obtained and send the respondent attorney(s) a notice of the allegations and an election notice;<sup>4</sup> 2) make an initial determination that there is No Just Cause and send the matter to a Summary Disposition Panel for the Panel's final determination as to whether the Complaint should be dismissed or proceed to litigation<sup>5</sup>; 3) issue investigatory subpoena(s) to assist it in obtaining additional information for its Just Cause/No Just Cause determination<sup>6</sup>; or 4) set the matter before an Investigatory Hearing Panel to assist it in obtaining additional information, for its Just Cause/No Just Cause determination.<sup>7</sup> In those cases that go before a Summary Disposition Panel of the appropriate district grievance committee, that panel reviews all investigative information provided by the CDC, and makes the final determination – not the CDC, CFLD, or a CDC attorney. TEX. RULES DISCIPLINARY P. R. 2.13.

The TRDPs also allow for a hearing before an Investigatory Hearing Panel as part of the CDC's ongoing investigation to determine if just cause exists, as another potential investigative tool for the CDC. Nevertheless, the decision whether to set a case for a hearing before an Investigatory Hearing Panel is within the sole discretion of the CDC. TEX. RULES DISCIPLINARY P. R. 2.12(F); see also, Sarfo v. Comm'n for Lawyer Discipline, No. 03-19-00146-CV, 2021 WL 746052, at *3, fn. 4 (Tex.App. – Austin Feb. 26, 2021, no pet.) (mem. op.). Further, contrary to Turnbull's unsupported assertion, the state law was not, "amended to allow an Investigatory Hearing panel to determine Just Cause and whether an attorney must select either an Evidentiary Panel review or District Court review." [Dkt. #20, p. 23]. There are only three possible outcomes

III. STANDARDS FOR DISMISSAL

A. Lack of Subject-Matter Jurisdiction Under Rule 12(b)(1)

Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(1) governs motions to dismiss for lack of subject-matter jurisdiction. When the court lacks the statutory or constitutional power to adjudicate a case, the case is properly dismissed for lack of subject-matter jurisdiction. Hooks v. Landmark Indus., Inc., 797 F.3d 309, 312 (5th Cir. 2015). Federal courts are courts of limited jurisdiction and possess only such power as authorized by the United States Constitution or by federal statute. Kokkonen v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of Am., 511 U.S. 375, 377 (1994) (citations omitted). It is presumed that a cause of action lies outside this limited jurisdiction and the burden of establishing jurisdiction falls to the party asserting jurisdiction. Id.

A motion to dismiss filed pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(1) “allow[s] a party to challenge the subject matter jurisdiction of the district court to hear a case.” Ramming v. United States, 281 F.3d 158, 161 (5th Cir. 2001). “The burden of proof for a Rule 12(b)(1) motion to dismiss is on the party asserting jurisdiction...[A]ccordingly, the plaintiff constantly bears the burden of proof that jurisdiction does in fact exist.” Id., (citations omitted). Moreover, a lack of subject-matter jurisdiction may be found in any of three instances: 1) the complaint alone; 2) the complaint and undisputed facts in the record; or 3) the complaint, undisputed facts in the record, and the court’s own resolution of disputed facts. Id. In this case, Plaintiff has not, and cannot, meet his burden to state any facts that would entitle him to relief against Defendants.

B. Failure to State a Claim Upon Which Relief Can Be Granted Under Rule 12(b)(6)

Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) governs motions to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. To avoid dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6), a plaintiff must plead sufficient facts to “state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face.” Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009) (quoting Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 570 (2007)). “A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged.” Id. While courts must accept all well-pleaded facts as true, viewing the complaint in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, they “do not accept as true conclusory allegations, unwarranted factual inferences, or legal conclusions.” Plotkin v. IP Axess Inc., 407 F.3d 690, 696 (5th Cir. 2005); see also Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 679; In re Great Lakes Dredge & Dock Co., 624 F.3d 201, 210 (5th Cir. 2010).

Further, the Supreme Court has declared that “[t]hreadbare recitals of the elements of a cause of action, supported by mere conclusory statements, do not suffice.” Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678 (internal citation omitted). In order for a claim to be plausible at the pleading stage, the complaint need not strike the reviewing court as probably meritorious, but it must raise “more than a sheer possibility” that the defendant has violated the law as alleged. Id. at 678.

IV. ARGUMENTS AND AUTHORITIES

A. The Court Lacks Subject Matter Jurisdiction over Plaintiff’s Claims Against Defendants – 12(b)(1).

1. 11th Amendment immunity bars Turnbull’s claims against Defendants.

The Eleventh Amendment of the United States Constitution bars suits in federal court against a state or one of its agencies, regardless of the relief requested, by anyone other than the federal government or another state. Pennhurst State Sch. & Hosp. v. Halderman, 465 U.S. 89, 100 (1984). That is, in general, the Eleventh Amendment leaves federal courts without jurisdiction to entertain suits directed against states. Green v. State Bar of Texas, 27 F.3d 1083, 1087 (5th Cir. 1994).

1994). And a plaintiff may not circumvent the Eleventh Amendment by suing a state official in his or her official capacity because such a suit would pose a claim against the state treasury. Id.; see also Pennhurst, 465 U.S. at 101 (citing Hawaii v. Gordon, 373 U.S. 57, 58 (1963) (per curiam)). Moreover, “a suit against state officials that is in fact a suit against a State is barred regardless of whether it seeks damages or injunctive relief.” Id., at 101-102; see also Cory v. White, 457 U.S. 85, 91 (1982).

In this case, Turnbull sued more than fifty (50) individuals, including the CFLD (which is comprised of 12 voluntary members appointed by the Texas Supreme Court and the State Bar), despite knowing that the CFLD could not have been involved in any decision(s) related to Turnbull’s alleged grievances and/or Complaints. In fact, the rules routinely cited by Turnbull in this lawsuit, as promulgated by the Texas Supreme Court, do not allow the CFLD to be involved in any disciplinary proceeding unless and until a Just Cause determination has been made – which Turnbull admits never occurred. TEX. RULES DISCIPLINARY P. R. 2.14 & 4.06(A).

As to the CDC, her only possible connection with Turnbull and the subject matter he alleges in this lawsuit arises solely in her capacity as the CDC and her decision to classify his grievances as inquiries and/or present his alleged Complaints to a volunteer Summary Disposition Panel, pursuant to the TRDPs. The CFLD (a committee of the State Bar), the CDC, and all assistant disciplinary counsels, are entitled to Eleventh Amendment immunity.<sup>8</sup> See Green, 27 F.3d at 1087; Krempp v. Dobbs, 775 F.2d 1319, 1321 (5th Cir. 1985); Beman v. Smith, MO-07-CV-055, 2007 WL 9751723, at *3 (W.D. Tex. Aug. 10, 2007); and Bishop v. State Bar of Tex., 791 F.2d

<sup>8</sup> The State Bar is an agency of the Texas judicial department. TEX. GOV’T CODE ANN. §81.011(a) (West 2017). The Commission for Lawyer Discipline is a standing committee of the State Bar. TEX. GOV’T CODE ANN. §81.076(b) (West 2017). Contrary to the assertions in Turnbull’s lawsuit, the “Office of the Chief Disciplinary Counsel” is neither a “standing committee of the State Bar of Texas”, nor an entity with any separate, legal existence at all.

435, 438 (5th Cir. 1986) (accord Clulow v. Oklahoma, 700 F.2d 1291, 1298 (10th Cir. 1983) ("bar officials charged with the duties of investigating, drawing up, and presenting cases involving attorney discipline enjoy absolute immunity from damage claims for such functions")).

Because the CFLD and Willing are protected by 11th Amendment immunity, Plaintiff's claims could succeed only if there existed an unambiguous, express waiver of immunity. Welch v. Tex. Dep't of Highways & Public Transp., 483 U.S. 468, 473-474 (1987); Hans v. Louisiana, 134 U.S. 1, 16-17 (1890). Here, Turnbull can identify no such waiver. Thus, the Court should dismiss Turnbull's claims against Defendants for want of jurisdiction.

2. Absolute immunity bars Turnbull's claims against the CFLD and Willing.

In relevant part, Texas Rule of Disciplinary Procedure Rule 17.09 provides absolute and unqualified immunity to the CFLD, the CDC, and staff members of the CDC's office for any conduct in the course of their official duties:

All members of the Commission, the Chief Disciplinary Counsel (including Special Assistant Disciplinary Counsel appointed by the Commission [for Lawyer Discipline] and attorneys employed on a contract basis by the Chief Disciplinary Counsel), all members of Committees, all officers and Directors of the State Bar, and the staff members of the aforementioned entities are immune from suit for any conduct in the course of their official duties. The immunity is absolute and unqualified and extends to all actions at law or in equity.

—TEX. RULES DISCIPLINARY P. R. 17.09 (emphasis added).

The issue of immunity may be decided as a matter of law based on the lawsuit and any attachments thereto. See Austin Municipal Securities, Inc., et al., 757 F.2d 676, 691-92 (5th Cir. 1985) (finding that disciplinary officers had not waived their absolute immunity from suit). Recognizing the importance of the disciplinary process, courts grant broad immunity to those involved in the process. Bishop v. State Bar of Texas, 791 F.2d 435, 438 (5th Cir. 1986); Diddel v. Davis, Civil Action No. H-04-4811, 2006 WL 8444647 (S.D. Tex. Jan. 30, 2006). Absolute immunity protects even actions that a plaintiff could ultimately establish were in violation of law.

Diddel, 2006 WL 8444647 at *4, citing DL Capital Group, LLC v. Nasdaq Stock Market, Inc., 409 F.3d 93, 95 (2d Cir. 2005).

Again, Willing is the current CDC. As such, any actions taken by her with respect to Turnbull's claims in this matter relate solely to attorney disciplinary proceedings. Additionally, the CFLD is specifically named in the rule as an entity that is granted immunity from suit. Therefore, Turnbull's claims, if any, cannot survive the broad protection provided by Rule 17.09 of the TRDPs, and this lawsuit against Defendants should be dismissed.

3. Qualified immunity bars any individual-capacity claims against Willing.

Similarly, Willing is entitled to qualified immunity to the extent any of Turnbull's claims are asserted against her in her individual capacity. Qualified immunity is immunity from suit and not just a mere defense to liability and shields a defendant from the costs of trial and burdens of broad-reaching discovery. Mitchell v. Forsyth, 472 U.S. 511, 526 (1985). The Supreme Court has stressed that qualified immunity must be decided at the earliest possible stage in litigation. Hunter v. Bryant, 502 U.S. 224, 227 (1991). Further, the Fifth Circuit has long held that qualified immunity is to be resolved on the face of the pleadings and with limited resort to pre-trial discovery. Babb v. Dorman, 33 F.3d 472, 477 (5th Cir. 1994) (citing James v. Sadler, 909 F.2d 834, 838 (5th Cir. 1990)).

The Fifth Circuit has emphasized the extent of this shield, finding that a government official is entitled to qualified immunity unless all reasonable officials would have realized that the challenged conduct was proscribed by law at the time the official acted and under the circumstances the official acted. Dudley v. Angel, 209 F.3d 460, 462 (5th Cir. 2000). Once a government official has asserted qualified immunity the burden shifts to the plaintiff to show that qualified immunity does not bar recovery. Salas v. Carpenter, 980 F.2d 299, 305 (5th Cir. 1992).

In determining whether the plaintiff has successfully overcome qualified immunity, the court engages in a two-step inquiry. First, the court must consider “whether the plaintiff asserted a violation of a constitutional right at all – prior to addressing the potentially unnecessary question of whether plaintiff asserted a violation of a clearly established right.” Siegert v. Gilley, 500 U.S. 226, 230 (1991) (internal quotation marks omitted). Next, the court must consider whether the defendant’s conduct was nonetheless objectively reasonable in light of clearly established law. Anderson v. Creighton, 483 U.S. 635, 639 (1987).

Here, Turnbull argues that the CFLD, Willing, and the named employees of the CDC, violated his “constitutional protections” because Willing decided, based on the evidence obtained during her investigation, to present his alleged Complaints against the Microsoft Attorneys to a Summary Disposition Panel instead of an Investigatory Hearing Panel. [Dkt. #20, pp. 16-19 and 23-25]. Turnbull makes no allegation that his alleged Complaints were not investigated by the CDC, or that defendants were required to do anything other than follow the procedures set forth in the TRDPs regarding determination of Just Cause or No Just Cause for attorney disciplinary Complaints.

Turnbull’s conclusory allegations regarding the discretionary acts of the CDC, and his failure to even address the discretionary acts of the voluntary Summary Disposition Panel in dismissing his alleged Complaints, provide no support for any argument against Defendants’ immunity claims. Babb, 33 F.3d at 476; Templeton v. Jarmillo, No. A-19-CV-00848-JRN, 2020 WL 5552619 (W.D.Tex. July 8, 2020).

As described above, presenting a Complaint to a Summary Disposition Panel leaves the ultimate decision of whether to dismiss a Complaint or find Just Cause up to the assigned panel, not the CFLD, CDC, or an employee of the CDC. Therefore, the CFLD, CDC, and her employees are entitled to qualified immunity and Turnbull's claims against them should be dismissed.

4. *Turnbull fails to set forth any claims that would make Willing liable in her individual capacity.

Although Turnbull amended this lawsuit on May 25, 2023, in an attempt to sue Willing in her individual capacity, he fails to identify even one act Willing took outside the general scope of her employment. See Alexander v. Walker, 435 S.W.3d 789, 790 (Tex. 2014) (explaining that conduct falls outside the scope of employment when it occurs “within an independent course of conduct not intended by the employee to serve any purpose of the employer”). Turnbull also admits in his pleadings that Willing is an employee of the Office of CDC and his claims against Willing relate to the discretionary decisions she made related to his alleged Complaints, pursuant to the TRDPs. [Dkt. #20, See generally]. Because Turnbull makes no claim that Willing acted outside the scope of her authority and only complains of her discretionary decisions, Willing is entitled to qualified immunity, and the immunities afforded to her under the Eleventh Amendment and Rule 17.09 of the TRDPs. See Crampton v. Farris, 596 S.W.3d 267 (Tex. App. – Houston [1st Dist.] 2019, no pet.).

B. Plaintiff's Failure to State a Plausible Claim – 12(b)(6)

In this lawsuit, Turnbull alleges four causes of action: 1) an equal protection claim under 42 U.S.C. §1983; 2) a First Amendment claim under 42 U.S.C. §1983; 3) a claim he was denied “due course of law” and access to open courts under the Texas Constitution Article I, Sections 13 and 19; and 4) a claim he was denied his “right to equal protection of the law” under Article I, Section 3 of the Texas Constitution. However, Turnbull’s conclusory statements are insufficient to state a claim for which relief can be granted. Babb, 33 F.3d at 476. Moreover, Turnbull’s allegations belie either a misunderstanding of a complainant’s role and rights in the attorney disciplinary system, or an intention to misuse or abuse that system. The TDRPCs expressly address the scope of the Rules:

These rules do not undertake to define standards of civil liability of lawyers for professional conduct. Violation of a rule does not give rise to a private cause of action nor does it create any presumption that a legal duty to a client has been breached. Likewise, these rules can be abused when they are invoked by opposing parties as procedural weapons. The fact that a rule is a just basis for a lawyer's self-assessment, or for sanctioning a lawyer under the administration of a disciplinary authority, does not imply that an antagonist in a collateral proceeding or transaction has standing to seek enforcement of the rule. Accordingly, nothing in the rules should be deemed to augment any substantive legal duty of lawyers or the extra-disciplinary consequences of violating such a duty.

—TEX. DISCIPLINARY R. PROF. CONDUCT, PREAMBLE: SCOPE, ¶15

I. *Turnbull's assertions do not constitute a cognizable equal protection claim under 42 U.S.C. §1983.

A claim asserted under 42 U.S.C. §1983 requires that a plaintiff: 1) allege a violation of a right secured by the Constitution or laws of the United States; and 2) demonstrate that any alleged deprivation of that right was committed by a person acting under color of state law. James v. Texas Collin Cnty., 535 F.3d 365, 373 (5th Cir. 2008) (quoting Moore v. Willis Indep. Sch. Dist., 233 F.3d 871, 874 (5th Cir. 2000)). Additionally, a plaintiff must show that “each Government-official defendant, through his own individual actions, has violated the Constitution.” Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 663. As the Supreme Court explained, “where the well-pleaded facts do not permit the court to infer more than the mere possibility of misconduct, the complaint has alleged – but has not ‘show[n]’ – that the pleader is entitled to relief.” Id. at 679. Here, Turnbull’s allegations do not allege a violation of any “right” secured by the Constitution or laws of the United States. Moreover, Turnbull has failed to specifically allege any facts showing that any named defendant violated his rights.

Here, Turnbull is “unable to show that the consideration of his bar grievance ‘produce[d] erroneous or unreliable results [that] imperil[ed] a protected liberty or property interest.’”

Martinez v. State Bar of Texas, 797 Fed.Appx. 167, 168 (5th Cir. 2020) (citing Johnson v. Rodriguez, 110 F.3d 299, 308 (5th Cir. 1997)). As noted above, a complainant in a Texas attorney disciplinary matter is not a “party” to such proceeding. Thus, Turnbull’s allegations do not establish “that he had a cognizable interest in the procedures used to consider his bar grievance or in the ultimate outcome of the proceeding.” Martinez, 797 Fed.Appx. at 168, citing Linda R.S. v. Richard D., 410 U.S. 614, 619 (1973) and Myers v. Klevenhagen, 97 F.3d 91, 94 (5th Cir. 1996).

Further, while Turnbull generally asserts that Defendants denied him “equal protection” of the law because his alleged Complaints against the Microsoft Attorneys were presented to a Summary Disposition Panel, he acknowledges that his alleged Complaints were in fact presented and dismissed by that Summary Disposition Panel and not by any of the defendants named in this lawsuit. [Dkt#20, page 16, ¶53]. And, while Turnbull argues he was “discriminated” against because his Complaints should have been presented to an Investigatory Hearing Panel, similar to what happened in three unrelated pending public Disciplinary Actions,<sup>9</sup> Turnbull’s perception that his alleged Complaints are “similar” to those filed in the above-referenced Disciplinary Actions is clearly wrong, as evidenced by the district court’s record in each of the Disciplinary Actions he has referenced.<sup>10</sup>

<sup>9</sup> Cause No. 471-02574-2022, Comm’n for Lawyer Discipline v. Warren Kenneth Paxton, Jr., in the 471st Judicial District Court, Collin County, Texas; Cause No. 22-0594-C9368, Comm’n for Lawyer Discipline v. Brent Edward Webster, in the 368th Judicial District Court, Williamson County, Texas; and Cause No. DC-22-02562, Comm’n for Lawyer Discipline v. Sidney Powell, in the 116th Judicial District Court, Dallas County, Texas.

<sup>10</sup> Ironically, Turnbull tries to bolster his claim that he was denied “equal protection”, by stating that the CFLD and/or CDC exists only to “dismiss Grievances against politically popular lawyers without an investigation.” Turnbull directly contradicts himself by acknowledging currently pending, public attorney disciplinary actions against other, undeniably politically popular and powerful lawyers. [Dkt. #20, pp. 30-34].

Most damaging here is that Turnbull does not even allege that he was discriminated against because he is a member of a protected class (e.g., race, sex, or national origin). He instead asserts, again in conclusory fashion, that his “political affiliation as a criminal defense attorney” makes him “politically unpopular and unpowerful.” However, Turnbull does not allege that any defendant knew of or was motivated by that “affiliation.” [Dkt. #20, pp. 25-29].

For all these reasons, Turnbull has failed to meet the standard necessary to bring an equal protection claim under 42 U.S.C. §1983, and his suit should be dismissed.

2. *Turnbull’s assertions do not constitute a cognizable First Amendment claim under 42 U.S.C. §1983.

Turnbull claims Defendants retaliated against him for exercising free expression, thereby depriving him of his right to freedom of speech because he suffered “an injury that would chill the speech of a person of ordinary firmness from continuing to engage in filing Grievances.” [Dkt. #20, pp. 28-29]. To prevail on this claim, Turnbull must show not only that Defendants acted with a retaliatory motive and that he was injured, but also that the motive was a “but-for” cause of his injury. Hartman v. Moore, 547 U.S. 250, 259-60 (2006).

This argument fails because Turnbull fails to identify any injury or state how his speech was chilled. In fact, Turnbull’s First Amendment claim is negated by his own assertion that he filed at least four additional grievances after his two Complaints were dismissed by a Summary Disposition Panel. [Dkt. #20, pp. 17-19]. Any assertion that Turnbull was denied the right to free speech is negated by the fact that “his speech,” in the form of his alleged Complaints, was in fact presented to a Summary Disposition Panel. [Dkt. #20, p. 16]. The “Constitution does not require the State to take any particular action in response.” Martinez, 797 Fed.Appx. at 168 (citing Smith v. Ark. St. Hwy. Emp., Local 1315, 441 U.S. 463, 465 (1979)). Thus, there was no retaliation and no infringement on Turnbull’s freedom of speech and this claim should be dismissed.

3. *Turnbull fails to state claims under Texas Constitution Article I, Sections 3, 13 and 19

Turnbull argues that the Texas Constitution requires that the courts be open and that section 81.072(b)(2) of the Texas Government Code “guarantees” him a right to a “full and fair” explanation of the reason(s) any alleged Complaint might have been dismissed. [Dkt.#20, p. 35]. He further claims that failing to provide the requested information is a violation of his right to due course of law. [Dkt. #20, p. 35]. However, section 81.072(b)(2) of the Texas Government Code provides no such “guarantees”. It simply provides that “in furtherance of the supreme court’s powers to supervise the conduct of attorneys,” the Texas Supreme Court shall establish “minimum standards and procedures for the attorney disciplinary and disability system...,” that include a provision for a complainant to receive a “full explanation” for the dismissal of a grievance in compliance with the confidentiality provisions set forth in section 81.0752 of the Texas Government Code.

a. Open Courts Claim

Turnbull’s claims under Art. I, Section 13 of the Texas Constitution also provide him no legal basis for a claim against the Defendants named in his lawsuit or the ability to force Defendants to violate Rule 2.16 of the TRDP or Tex. Gov’t Code §81.0752. The “open courts” provision provides that: “all courts shall be open, and every person for an injury done to him, in his lands, goods, person or reputation, shall have remedy by due course of law.” TEX. CONST. ART. I, SEC. 13. “The open courts provision includes at least three separate guarantees: (1) courts must actually be operating and available; (2) the Legislature cannot impede access to the courts through unreasonable financial barriers; and (3) meaningful remedies must be afforded, ‘so that the legislature may not abrogate the right to assert a well-established common law cause of action unless the reason for its action outweighs the litigants’ constitutional right of redress.’” Howell v.

Texas Workers' Comp. Comm'n, 143 S.W.3d 416, 444 (Tex.App.-Austin 2004, pet. denied) (quoting Texas Workers' Comp. Comm'n v. Garcia, 893 S.W.2d 504, 520 (Tex.1995)) (internal citations omette).

However, the open courts provision “applies only to statutory restrictions of a cognizable common law cause of action.” Peeler v. Hughes & Luce, 909 S.W.2d 494, 499 (Tex. 1995) (citing Moreno v. Sterling Drug, Inc., 787 S.W.2d 348, 355-56 (Tex. 1990)). Utilizing the attorney grievance process is neither a remedy – that can cause injury to a complainant - nor a means of redress for any complainant. Simply put, a complainant is not a party to a disciplinary proceeding. Further, the grievance process does not constitute a common law cause of action. The discretionary decisions of the CDC to present Turnbull’s alleged Complaints to a Summary Disposition Panel cannot violate the open courts provision of the Texas Constitution. As such, Turnbull’s requests to compel Defendants to provide him with confidential information should be dismissed.

b. Due Course of Law Claim

Article 1, Section 19 of the Texas Constitution states that “[n]o citizen of this State shall be deprived of life, liberty, property, privileges or immunities, or in any manner disfranchised, except by the due course of the law of the land.” TEX. CONST. ART. 1, SEC. 19. Texas courts have considered federal interpretations of procedural due process when applying Texas’s guarantee of due process of law. Univ. of Tex. Med. School at Houston v. Than, 901 S.W.2d 926, 929 (Tex. 1995). When determining whether a governmental action violates the due course of law guarantee, the courts engage in a two-step inquiry. Id. The court first determines if the plaintiff has an enumerated interest that is entitled to protection, and if so, then did the governmental agency follow due course of law in depriving the plaintiff of that interest. Id.

Here, Turnbull claims he has a property right to a “full and fair explanation for the reasons his [alleged] Grievances were dismissed,” and argues that application of Rule 2.16 of the TRDP deprives him of that right. However, he provides no supporting reference as to what such explanation is required to include, nor any precedent that directs the defendants to ignore the TRDPs that were promulgated by the Texas Supreme Court. Moreover, Turnbull’s argument has already been addressed by the Texas Third Court of Appeals (Austin) in 2015, which held that a complainant’s entitlement to a “full explanation” under §81.072(b)(2)<sup>11</sup> does not authorize, much less require, that the CDC disclose its recommendation to the Summary Disposition Panel. See Doe v. Bd. of Directors of the State Bar of Tex., No. 03-15-00007-CV, 2015 WL 6656216, *4-5 (Tex.App. – Austin Oct. 27, 2015, pet. denied). Because Defendants followed all applicable procedures required of them by the Texas Supreme Court, and Turnbull has acknowledged that he was provided with the explanation that his alleged Complaints were dismissed for lack of just cause [Dkt. #20, ¶¶102, 108], Turnbull’s due course of law argument fails and should be dismissed.

c. Equal Protection Claim

The Texas Supreme Court has held that the equal protection analysis under the federal Equal Protection Clause applies to equal protection challenges under the Texas Constitution. See Bell v. Low Income Women, 95 S.W.3d 253, 266 (Tex. 2002). As in federal court, Texas requires a plaintiff to allege “he has been intentionally treated differently from others similarly situated and that there is no rational basis for the difference in treatment.” Leonard v. Abbott, 171 S.W.3d 451, 458 (Tex. App.—Austin 2005, pet. denied) (citing Village of Willowbrook v. Olech, 528 U.S. 562, 564 (2000) and Allegheny Pittsburgh Coal Co. v. County Commission of Webster County, 488 U.S. 336, 345–46 (1989)).

In this case, Turnbull claims Defendants deprived him of his right to equal protection by “treating him differently than other similarly situated complainants in being denied a full and fair explanation for why his Grievances were dismissed.” However, as described exhaustively above, Turnbull has failed to name even one other complainant who has ever received a copy of the “recommendation/reasoning” for a Summary Disposition Panel’s decision, most likely because such would be a violation of Section 81.0752 of the Texas Government Code. As such, he has not shown that he was treated any differently than any other attorney complainant, and his equal protection claim should be dismissed.

C. Plaintiff does not meet the requisites for injunctive relief.

To the extent Turnbull’s request for injunctive relief is not already moot, Defendants argue that Turnbull has not shown that he meets the requisites for preliminary or permanent injunction. Injunctive relief should be used “sparingly, and only . . . in clear and plain case[s].” Rizzo v. Goode, 423 U.S. 362, 378 (1976) (citation and internal quotations omitted). “In exercising their equitable powers federal courts must recognize “[t]he special delicacy of the adjustment to be preserved between federal equitable power and State administration of its own law.” City of Los Angeles v. Lyons, 461 U.S. 95, 112 (1983). To support the “extraordinary equitable remedy” of a preliminary injunction, the plaintiff must establish four elements: “(1) a substantial likelihood of success on the merits; (2) a substantial threat that the movant will suffer irreparable injury if the injunction is denied; (3) that the threatened injury outweighs any damage that the injunction might cause the defendant; and (4) that the injunction will not disserve the public interest.” Jackson Women’s Health Org. v. Currier, 760 F.3d 448, 452 (5th Cir. 2014).

Again, as previously noted, Turnbull is unlikely to succeed on the merits of his lawsuit as he does not have a cognizable interest in the procedures used to consider his bar grievances or in the ultimate outcome of the proceeding. Martinez, 797 Fed.Appx. at 167-168. Additionally, since a complainant cannot be a “party” to a disciplinary proceeding there exists no substantial threat that Turnbull will suffer an irreparable injury if the injunction is denied. In fact, his only claim of “injury” is that his right to free speech will be “chilled.” This claim completely lacks merit because, by his own admission, Turnbull filed additional grievances after his alleged Complaints were dismissed and filed a lawsuit against Microsoft, which is still pending. Because Turnbull cannot meet all four elements, his request for an injunction should be denied.

V. CONCLUSION

WHEREFORE, Defendants pray that this Court grant Defendants’ motion to dismiss Plaintiff’s lawsuit against the Commission for Lawyer Discipline and Seana Willing. Defendants further request any and all further relief to which they may be entitled, both at law and in equity.
